Need a Ride??? Cheap travel options

Needaride.com.au is a virtual notice board where people can post offers and requests for lifts around the country FOR FREE. Users are mostly budget travellers, students and backpackers, both visitors and Australians alike.

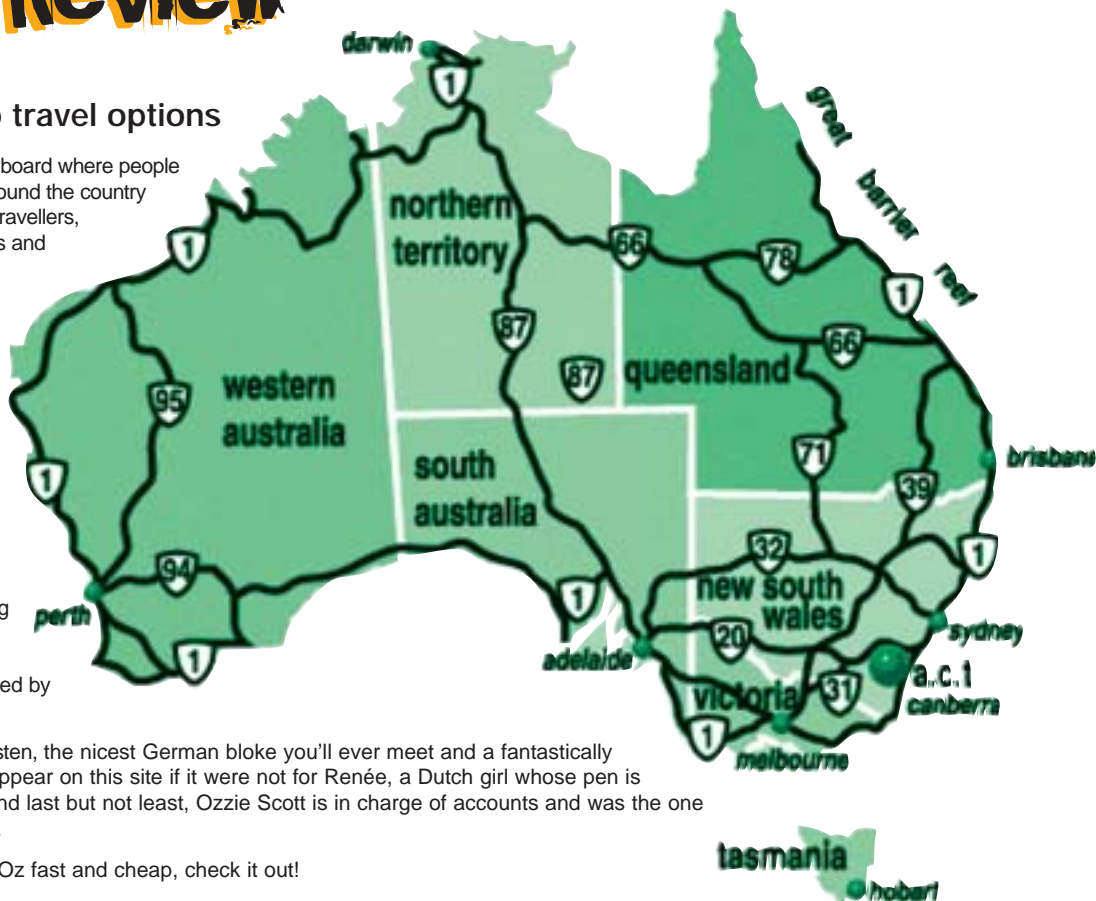

In August 2002 three students got together complaining about the high costs of travelling by coach, train or plane in Australia and the fact that there is no way of ever getting off the beaten track by public transport. So instead of whining they decided to do something about it and set up the first ever virtual notice board for rides.

Now, the cheapest and most effective way of travelling around is by browsing a database. Many similar websites were created after the launch of the Need-a-ride site. The site itself is funded by ads.

Need-a-ride owes its existence to Torsten, the nicest German bloke you'll ever meet and a fantastically creative webmaster. No text would appear on this site if it were not for Renée, a Dutch girl whose pen is sometimes sharper than her nails. And last but not least, Ozzie Scott is in charge of accounts and was the one who got together the start-up capital.

So if you're looking to travel around Oz fast and cheap, check it out!
